

Rural States Have a Shortage of Doctors Relative to Their Population

Measuring physician density per 100k people, the South, Southwest, and Great Plains all face a shortage of both specialists and primary care providers

Source: American Medical Association Master File